

YES, MEXICANS.
INDIANS SEEK WHITES' HELP
IN RUM CASE

"Me, Big Chief Jack has ordered Big White Chief Williams to clean 'em up—he make my Indians crazy for 'fourteen days!"

This was the introduction given Chief of Police Clay Williams to the hundreds of inhabitants of the Indian reservation north of this city this morning, when he called in the aid to the "white chief" to put an end to a booze dispensary established on the reservation by an unnamed Mexican.

And "clean 'em up," he did. Ninety-two bottles of beer, right off the ice were destroyed by the two chieftains, working side by side, and the menace to the peace and quiet of the reservation abated, at least temporarily.

Chief Jack sought out Chief Williams, and insisted that he accompany him to the reservation, and upon arrival he dramatically ordered the cleanup in the fashion above described.
